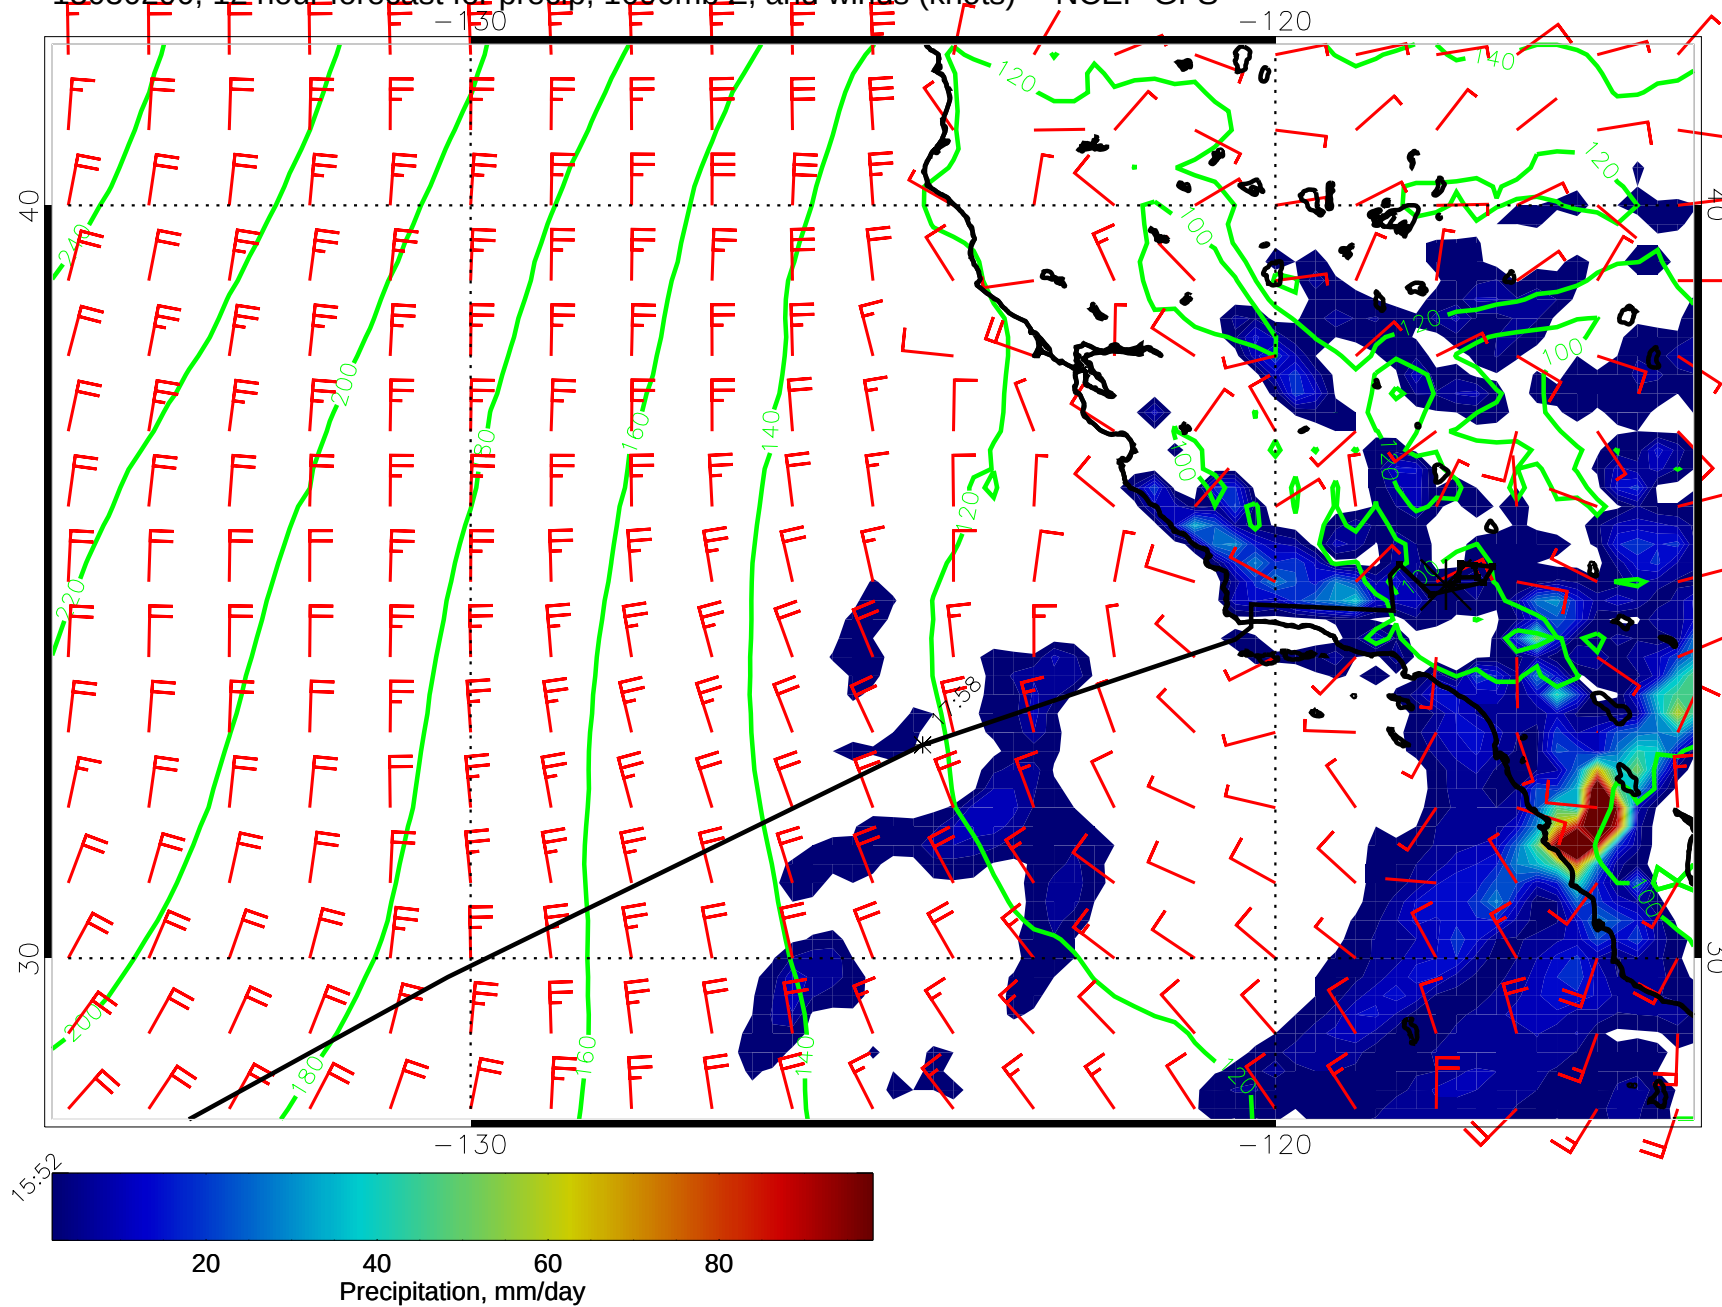

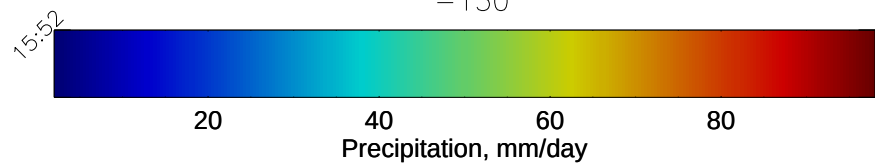

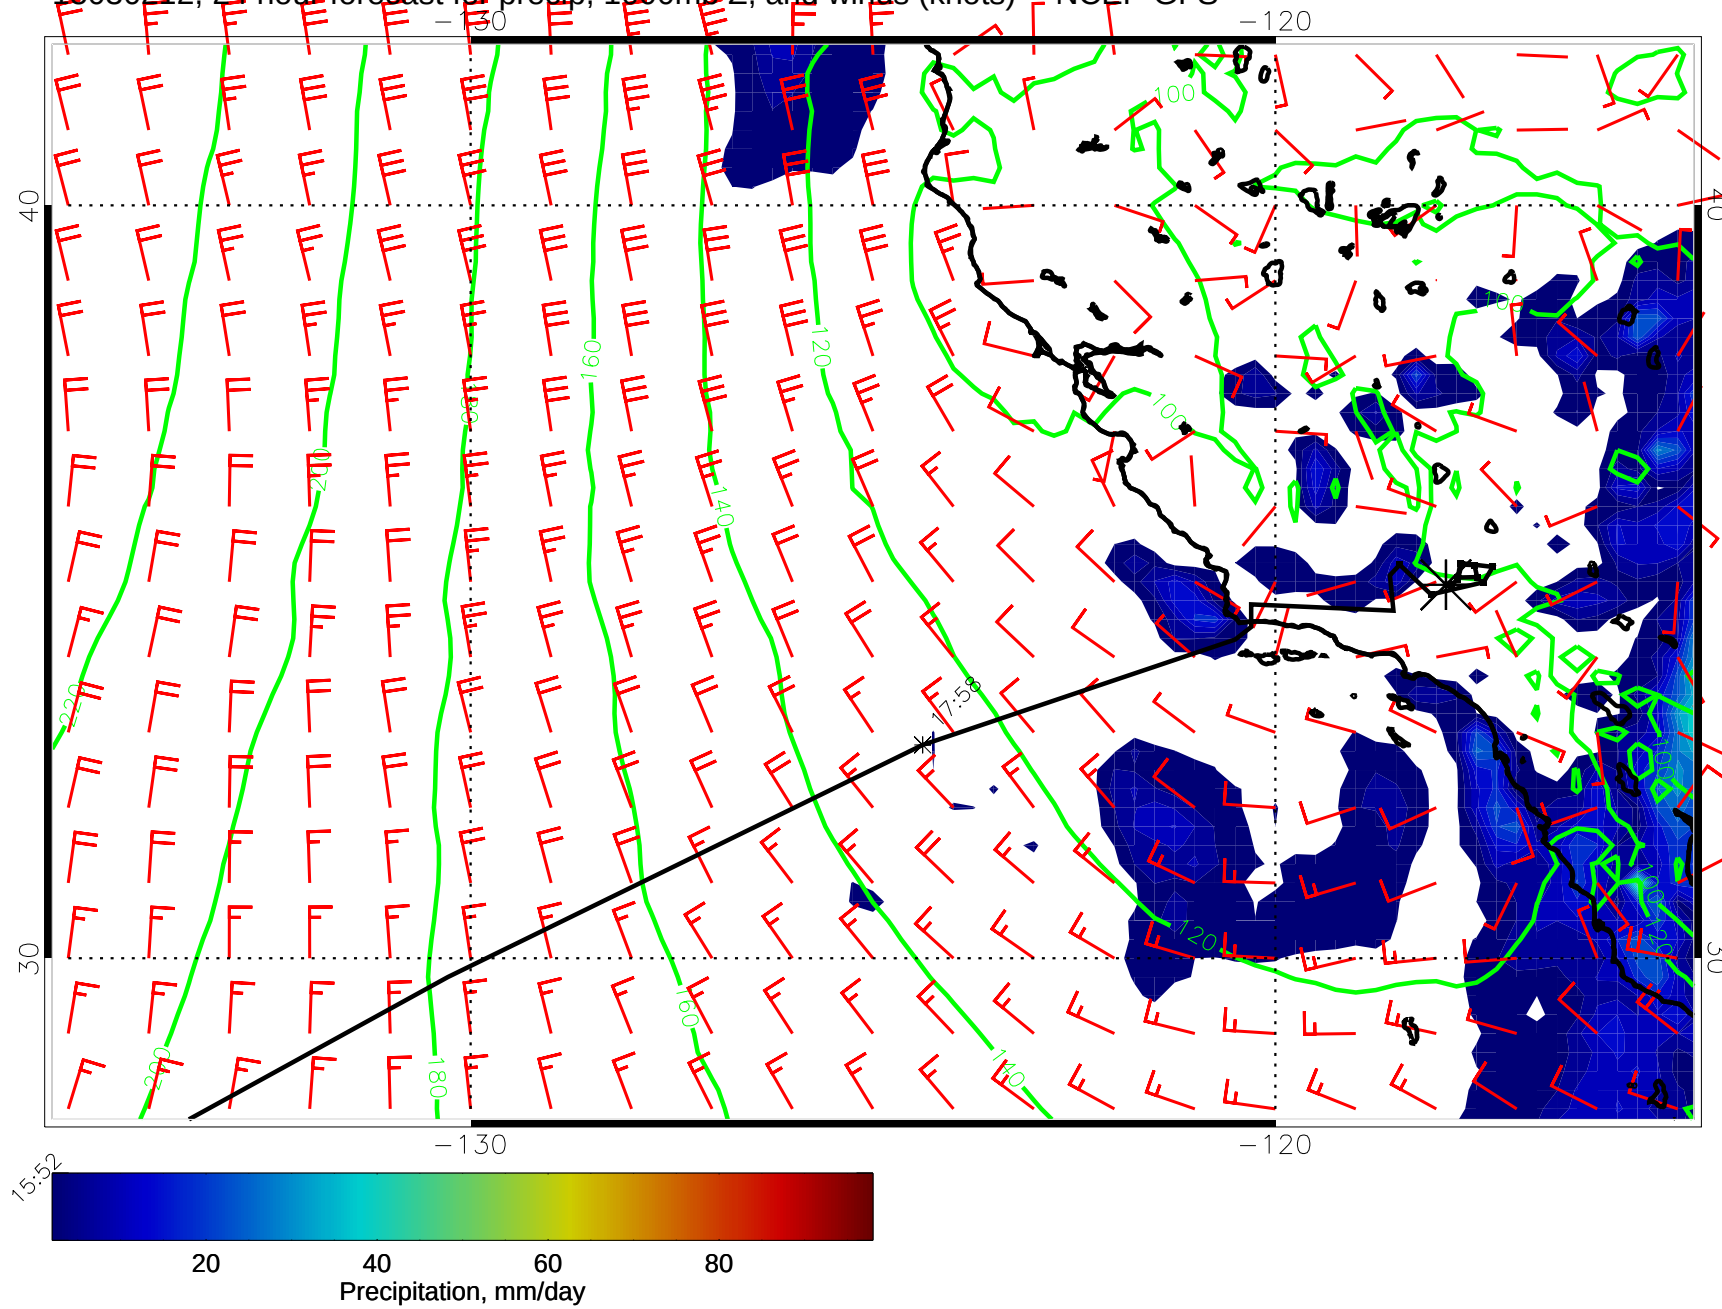

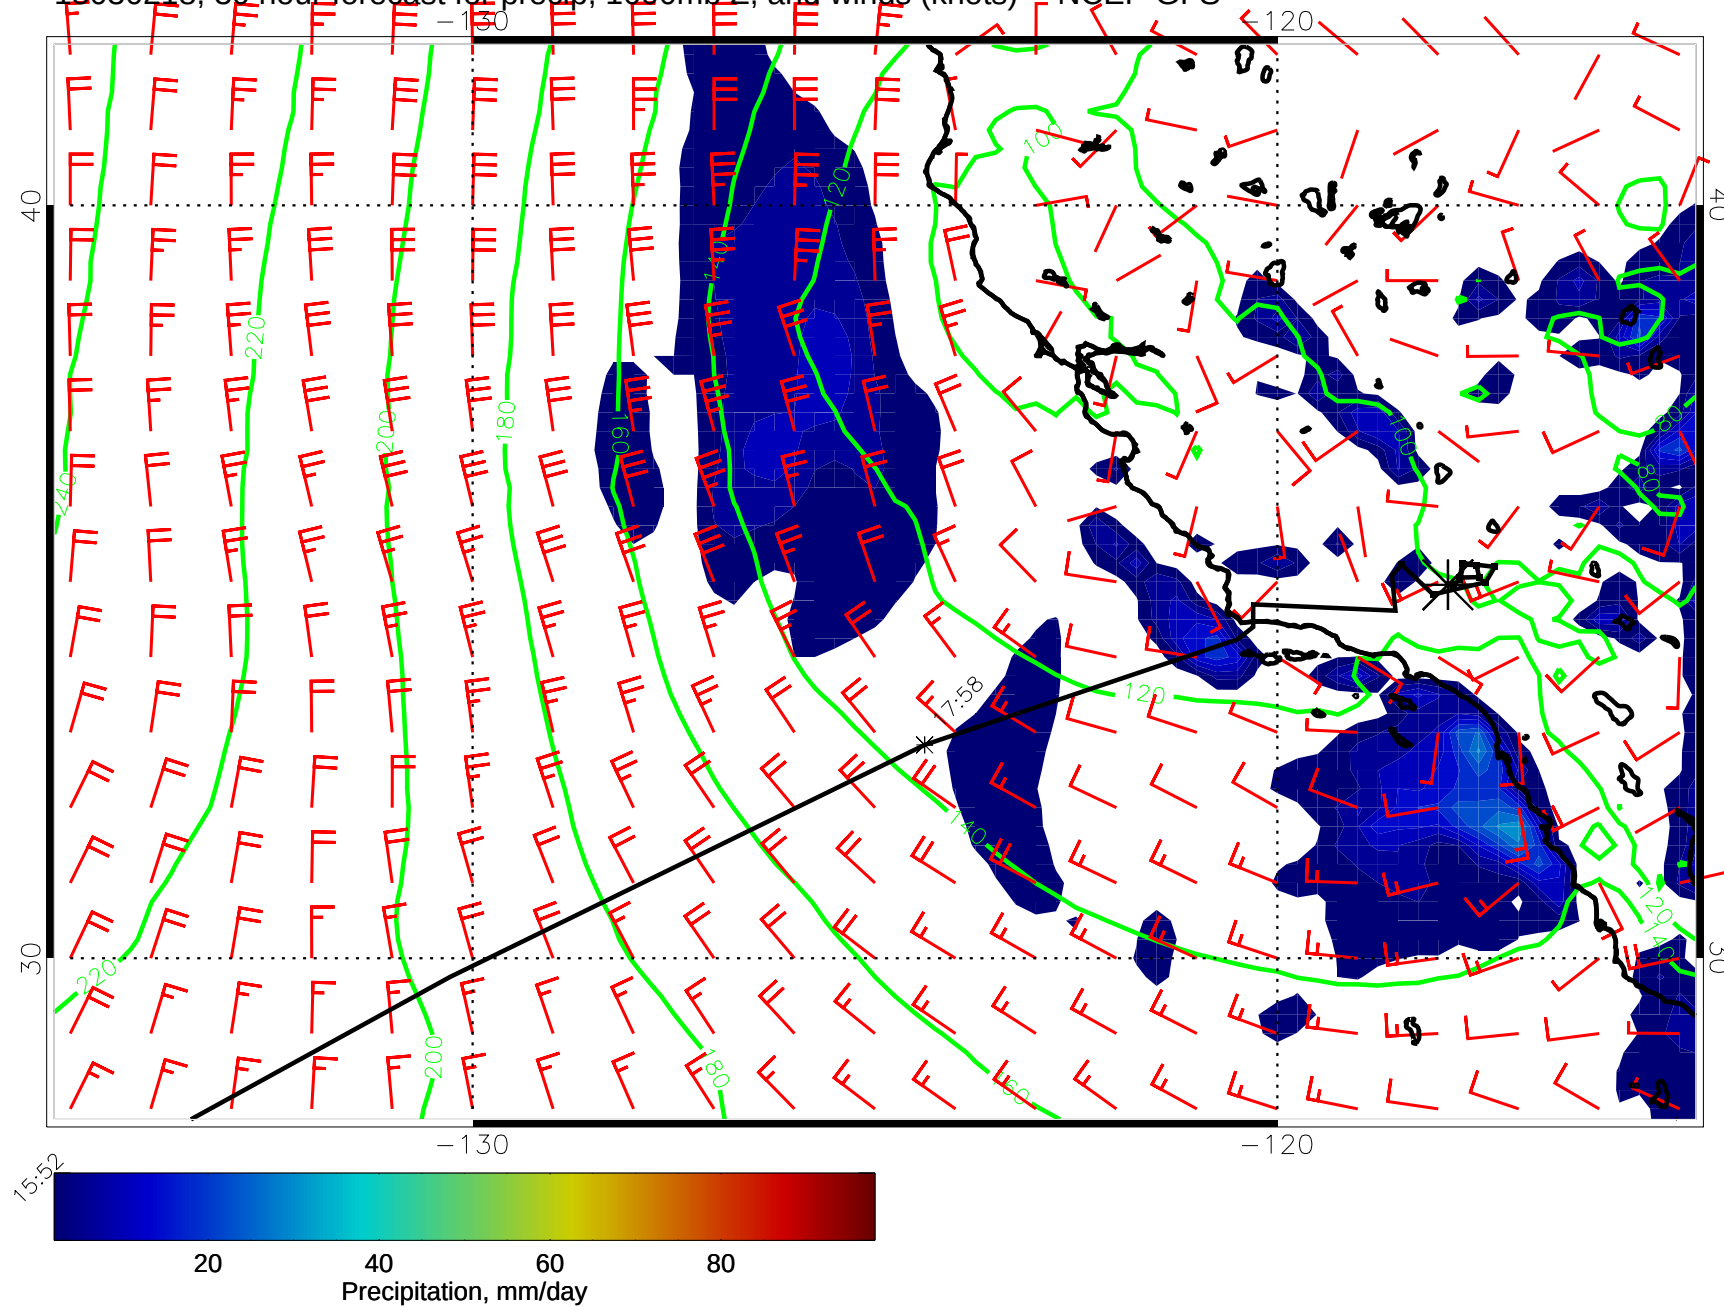

Figure 1 is a map of the North Pacific region, showing the distribution of sea surface temperature (SST) and sea level pressure (SLP) anomalies. The map includes a grid of red arrows representing SLP anomalies and green contour lines representing SST anomalies. A black line indicates the 17:38 time slice. The map shows a strong negative SLP anomaly over the North Pacific, with a corresponding positive SST anomaly over the North Pacific and negative SST anomalies over the North Atlantic and North Indian Oceans.
